WILL AUSTIN

Will Austin graduated from MFHS in 1986. He has a Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Illinois in Urbana and a Masters of Business Administration from The Ohio State University. After graduate school, Austin began working for General Motors Delco Electronics Division in Singapore before taking an eighteen-month assignment in Sao Paulo at Delphi Automotive Systems's South American headquarters. Later in his career, in 2002, he decided to develop a simple car to bring transportation to the developing world, so Austin founded the Institute for Affordable Transportation. This institute is a non-profit public charity devoted to developing and building basic vehicles for the world's less fortunate in order to bridge the gap between vital services and people in need.

Floyd received two Purple Hearts during his service to the country. After his time with the Army, Floyd became Chairman of the Board for the Heroes Helping Heroes Foundation, whose mission is “to serve and support these heroes and their families suffering from the silent wounds of first- and second-hand PTSD.” Floyd continues to serve his community as a deputy for Champaign County, for which he was recognized as the Champaign County Deputy of the Year in July 2023.

A progressive educator and innovator, Keyes organized the Maroa High School Camera Club and started the Radio Club, which installed the first intercom system not only at Maroa High but in all of Macon County. Mr. Keyes became Maroa High School principal in 1933, continuing his teaching in the classroom. Keyes' leadership extended beyond the classroom. During World War II, he and Mr. Nicols answered a government call to action by leading the Victory Corps initiative, an effort that saw 98% participation rate among Maroa's male students. He restructured High School courses to get students ready for military service in WWII, by offering classes in Radio, First Aid, and pre-flight. His dedication to civic engagement continued through his founding of the Maroa Civil Air Patrol Cadets program and the Ground Observation Corps. In 1948, Keyes became Maroa's first superintendent, a role in which he continued to champion academic excellence, extracurricular involvement, and student mentorship. His commitment to education and service left an indelible mark on the School District, the community, and the countless students whose lives he influenced.
